Gen-Eco can assist with hospitality projects in many areas. From Ecolite ceiling beams and panels, to wall cladding and custom tiles printed on fibre cement.

One of the main advantages we offer is our ability to tailor a fit-out to a clients specific ideas. A lot of our projects are 'one off' so whether it be a national chain or a local operator we can provide unique solutions that won't be seen in other businesses.

Some examples include:

Scuzi Café—this project started from a 200 x 200mm ceramic tile which was scanned, altered and increased in size to 600 x 600mm. By printing onto foamboard panels, the installation cost was greatly reduced.

Kivahan Coffee—the client wanted the look of timber for the bulkheads but the cost of engineering the ceiling to take the weight was prohibitive. The solution was to scan hardwood planks and print onto MDF—another cost saving that still looks like real timber that was used in other parts of the fit-out.

Cocobliss—we started by cutting fibre cement sheets into tiles, then printed the client supplied graphic onto the tiles. After being polyurethane coating they were tiled like any other ceramic tile.

Burger Urge—Rockhampton Shopfitter: Trademarc Product: Digital print on plywood panels to save cost on installation

Burrito Bar—Perigian Springs Designer: Blackbox Retail Design Shopfitter: Farrago Interiors Product: Concrete digital print on MDF panels

Burrito Bar—Holmview Designer: Blackbox Retail Design Shopfitter: Fix It Up Product: Ecolite Box Beams with concrete digital print

Mosaic Pizza—Loganholme Designer: Clui Design Product: Digitally printed wall panels of recycled timber. Printed on plywood panels which were installed as full sheets greatly reducing installation costs. Front counter was printed with in a textured metallic finish.

Pantry On Grey—Southbank Designer: Clui Design Product: Metallic steel digital print on MDF and machined into a C shape beam
